Property Description

Caballo de Oro, a 124-acre property located in Naranjito of Quepos, Costa Rica. It is a great investment opportunity, given its convenient location and potential for development. The fact that the property offers 100% usability is a great advantage, especially for those looking to use it for agriculture or build multiple homes for sale. The two public road entrances and the river running through the property are also significant advantages, as they provide easy access and could be utilized in various development plans. There is an existing caretaker's cabin adds to the property's charm. Considering the property's location close to the most visited National Park in Costa Rica, it could also have great potential as a tourist destination or eco-tourism development. Overall, Caballo de Oro seems like a promising investment opportunity, and I hope this information helps potential buyers make an informed decision.
